THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1902.
ALWAYS FOR A CHANGE.

The Democratic party is never satisfied with existing business conditions. It is the same whether we are in a state of disaster as a result of unwise Democratic legislation, or whether we are prospering from the operation of a judicious economic policy inaugurated by the Republican party. Only ten years ago the Democracy hoodwinked the people and made them believe the country was going to the dogs, though it was then enjoying a period of prosperity that was among the highest in our history as a nation. The supreme folly of placing every department of our government in the hands of the Democracy was committed. We all know what followed. Will the terrible condition of despair that prevailed in every section be forgotten in the brief period of six years?

We all remember how the Democracy in 1896 tried to divert the attention of the masses from the fact that the calamitous condition had been brought upon the country by a Democratic tariff; and how it sought to fasten the responsibility upon the Republicans by attributing that condition to the financial policy of the Republican party. They appealed to the farmer and told him that the price for his products had been reduced to less than the cost of production, and that this had been brought about by giving the gold dollar too much value. There was a prolonged Democratic wail over the condition of the "poor farmer," who could find no market for the products of his toil, or was compelled to sell at a ruinous price. He was told that if the gold standard was firmly established the situation would become more serious, and that the only way to cure the evil was to accept the Democratic prescription for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one.

The Democrats in 1896 also expressed great sympathy for the workman. More than a million strong men were unable to secure jobs and were tramping through the country begging for work. They were in a pitiful fix, and were told that the Republican policy was the cause. Although the farmers had bread and meat going to waste the workmen could not buy, even at the low prices that the Democrats were hawking about. The calamity howlers appealed to both the farmer and the workman for support, but the sufferers had the good sense to not listen to the appeals. The Republican party won, the gold standard was fully established, the Democracy has abandoned its position on the money question, the farmers are getting better prices and are more prosperous than they have ever been, a Republican protective tariff has again been enacted and put in operation, and the workman has found constant and profitable employment. The conditions of 1896 have been completely wiped out and a happy era ushered in. But the Democratic calamity howler is still alive. He has changed the nature of his appeals, however. We find him no longer trying to work upon the prejudices of the farmer by calling attention to his unhappy condition. The howler recognizes that such an effort would make him too ridiculous. So he turns to the workman, the consumer, and is trying to dissatisfy them by claiming that bread and meat are too high, that the good, living price the farmers are receiving for their products is an unjust burden on the laborer and consumer. Thus do we find the Democracy occupying a position toward the agricultural interests that is thoroughly inconsistent with that it held in 1896.

It is strange that so many farmers will continue to give their support to a party that shifts its position to suit the occasion and that shows so little sincerity in its treatment of the agricultural interests of the country.

The Georgia peach crop this year was a good one, the fruit was pronounced delicious and the prices were satisfactory to the growers.

We hope every Republican and every Democrat in Tazewell county will register as soon as the registration is opened; and we hope that no honest man in the county will be deprived of the right to vote.

The Democrats are expressing the hope that the Hon. Mark Hanna will decline to manage the Presidential campaign of 1904. Mr. Hanna may retire but the Republicans have many good men to take his place.

There have been promised an honest election in the Ninth District this fall. Such an election can only be secured by the registration of the Democrats of

We expect to have something interesting to say about the Constitutional Convention not requiring the registrars to take an oath, after we hear from the members of the Committee that framed the ordinance. We have mailed a letter to each member of that committee and have heard from some of them.

SEVERAL of the Democratic Congressmen are now engaged in a quarrel about who of them shall be Speaker of the next House of Representatives. This is a very foolish and idle controversy. In 1898 the Democrats were very confident of electing a majority to the House, but they were sadly disappointed. They are likely to have the same kind of experience in 1902.

THERE are a number of gentlemen in the Ninth District who seem to be willing to accept the Republican nomination for Congress. We admire their courage if we cannot endorse their discretion. With a knowledge of the way the Democratic managers have managed elections in the district, it is astonishing that any one should be willing to accept a nomination. With an honest election the Republicans can win.

THE Republicans of Buchanan county, Va., have made themselves noted by the resolutions they passed at a recent mass-meeting. Those resolutions were published in the Republican; and were copied by the Philadelphia Press and other papers at the North. The Republicans of Buchanan in very strong terms denounced the dishonest election methods that have prevailed in that county under the direction of the Democratic machine.

KINDLY TREATMENT.
And How it is Accorded the Public by the Newspapers.
St. Louis Republic (Dem.).

"It sounds a thunderer's sight bigger," remarks the sage of the Albany, Missouri Ledger, "to say that Mr. So-and-So accepted a position than to say he nearly ran his legs off and told about forty lies to get it."

In this reflection is truth of a kind so homely that it cannot fail to approve itself to the average man. When we come to think of it, this trick of tautologous expression is a great thing in the world. It is more largely instrumental in the making of reputations than any other influence pervades, especially in the case of those who are not really forceful persons, but who have the knack of keeping themselves in the public eye by conventional methods. In no department of the world's work does this truth more vividly impress itself upon the observant mind than in that of the daily newspaper, which is commonly believed to be a cynical sort of institution, wearied of life's humbugs and disposed to disillusionment. Yet it is the forbearing courtesy of the daily newspaper which is peculiarly and logically responsible for making the reputation of thousands who would otherwise have lived unknown and justly or unjustly obscure.

This further truth is due to the fact of the frequency with which personal mention of the most casual description is necessary and to the solicitude with which a newspaper places every individual in the best possible light before its readers. In this polite treatment of the average citizen by the average newspaper lies the secret of the vast majority of established reputations in every community. These thoughts are respectfully submitted to the attention of that illogical class so prone to the fallacy of abusing the daily press for alleged cynicism and indifference to worthy achievement. A newspaper is not only invariably glad to acclaim such achievement, but, even if anything, on the side of kindly mention of the most ordinary effort. The plain truth is that the daily press is good-natured and charitable beyond the usual run of things.

All Were Saved.
"For years I suffered such untold misery from Bronchitis," writes J. H. Johnson, of Broughton, Ga., "that often I was unable to work. Then, when everything else failed, I was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. My wife suffered intensely from Asthma, till it cured her, and all our experience goes to show it is the best Croup medicine in the world." A trial will convince you it's unrivaled for Throat and Lung disease. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Jno. E. Jackson's, druggist.

Settling the Race Problem.
Jacksonville Times Union (Dem.).
The resolutions adopted by the negro congress in Atlanta were wise and temperate. There is no race problem between the better classes of whites and blacks, and both races gain when the better elements assert themselves.

Look Pleasant, Please.
Photographer C. C. Harlan, of Eaton, O., can do so now, though for years he could not because he suffered untold agony from the worst form of indigestion. All physicians and medicines failed to help him. He tried Electric Bitters, which worked wonders for him that he dared they are a godsend to sufferers from dyspepsia and stomach troubles. Unrivaled for disease of the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, they build up and give new life to the whole system. Try them. Only Jno. E. Jackson, druggist.

EGYPT'S BIG DAM.

Will Control the Nile for Irrigation Purposes.

With the laying on the first day of the present month of the last coping stone of the great dam across the River Nile at Assouan the ancient land of the Pharaohs sees the completion of a national work which is not only the greatest of its kind in existence, but in its beneficent results will probably outrank any scheme carried out in Egypt either in ancient or modern times. The completion of this dam and a similar structure at Assiout will provide in the Nile Valley a vast reservoir, capable of supplying over a billion cubic yards of water every year. The surplus waters of the river will be stored during the flood season and then drawn upon for the irrigation of wide tracts of land which for centuries past have lain waste for want of water. As a result of the new system of irrigation there are extensive tracts of land which heretofore will bear two crops a year, where formerly they bore but one, while the area devoted to sugar cultivation will be greatly increased.

The Assouan dam itself is one of the greatest engineering works in existence. It is no less than one and a quarter miles in length and is pierced by 180 sluice gates 25 feet in height and 7 feet in width, by means of which the regulation of the waters will be secured. The total cost of the two dams will be about $25,000,000.

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED

At Panama, Columbia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Columbia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad attack of dysentery. Everything I prescribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were so weak that she could not turn over in bed. What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was entirely well." For sale by Jno. E. Jackson, druggist.

A MISSOURI ORATOR.

And a Story Which Throws Some Light on Missouri Manners.

Kansas City Journal.
One of the most popular orators of the State of Missouri for many years was General A. W. Doniphan, who won lasting fame by his services in the Mexican War. A writer in the Richmond "Missourian" tells a story of one of his early law suits. When a struggling lawyer at Lexington he went to Davis Creek, Lafayette county, to defend a man who was charged with hog stealing.

Doniphan, a buxom man and throwing a gun over his shoulder, that he might combine the pleasure of hunting with his professional duties, he set out. When he arrived at the log building which was used indiscriminately as a church, school house, court house and public hall, he found it crowded with people who had come to hear the "big-mouthed young fellow from the county seat" speak. He had no opportunity to sift the evidence. He very soon learned that he had a bad case. His client had stolen not one hog, but ten; and he had not only stolen them, but he had admitted it. In his speech, therefore, Doniphan did not say much about the evidence. He is credited with having once remarked that he was "smooth and easy in his speech when he knew exactly what he expected to say, he stamped the punchline." "And," he remarked, "they liked it best when I stamped the most." H must have stamped a good deal this time. He dwelt with pathetic effect on the general similarity of hogs, and the terrible mistake it would be to unjustly convict his client. "He pleased the Justice and tickled the people," says the writer who tells the story. "The Judge decided the case, clearing the hog thief quickly, so as to get to hear young Doniphan make a political speech before he started home. The young lawyer was too happily embarrassed to refuse to try to make a speech. Beginning the platform of loose puncheons he meant to talk, and won another victory. "It was my first real lesson in oratory," he afterwards said, finding out that people loved to hear blood and thunder talk.

The story throws interesting light on the manners of early Missourians, on the way justice was meted out in their courts and on the character of this brave Missouri hero.

A Cure for Cholera Infantum.
"Last May," says Mrs. Curtis Baker, of Bookwalter, Ohio, "an infant child of our neighbor was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctor had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days' time the child had fully recovered, and is now (nearly a year since) a vigorous, healthy girl. I have recommended this Remedy frequently and have never known it to fail in any single instance." For sale by Jno. E. Jackson, druggist.

TWO NATIONS CLAIM AN ACRE.

That Much Ground in South America Is in Dispute Between Brazil and Bolivia.

There is a region in northern Bolivia known on the maps as Acre, although it comprises many acres of fertile lands which has been disputed territory between Bolivia and Brazil for nearly 50 years. The little country has come into public notice recently because Bolivia leased a part of the Acre region to an Anglo-American syndicate. Brazil objects to this business arrangement, and has threatened to break off diplomatic relations unless the contract is rescinded.

Except that the country is rich in rubber, little is known about it. It occupies a triangular space between the boundaries of Brazil and Bolivia and Peru and Bolivia, with the Beni river as the base. The position of the sides of the triangle as interpreted by the two countries is the cause of the dispute. A traveler recently returned from Acre says of the natives that they are in many respects like the Bolivians, but that there are among them tribes of a lower class than can be found elsewhere in that part of the world. Some of them are said to be cannibals, and all are shy and averse to the invasion of their country by the whites. They are experts in the art of using darts, spears and javelins, and delight in practicing with them from the bush on intruders, whom they usually attack from behind.

They wear no clothes, but have elaborate headdresses made of feathers and heads, and the younger ones wear strings of colored and metal disks around their necks and wrists. There are no horses or mules in Acre, and the llama is used as the beast of burden.

CRUSHED BY MONOPOLY.

Pawnbrokers in France Is Entirely in the Hands of the Government.

A recent French trial shows how monopoly works even in the pawnbroking business. The police authorities brought suit in the eleventh correctional court of Paris against a group of persons who acted as agents for various moneylenders and pawnbrokers established in London. The action was in the interests of the Mont de Pieté de Paris, the French Pawnbroking association, which is a monopoly and under government supervision, says the New York Post. Persons desirous of pledging their jewels and other valuables found that they could obtain much better terms for loans with well-known London firms than at the state supervised establishments in France, and to meet the situation, a number of agencies were created in Paris, which undertook the business of pledging the articles in England. The Mont de Pieté complained of this competition, and their plea that it was an infringement of their monopoly was upheld by the court. The defendants were six in number. Two were sentenced to three months' imprisonment and 10,000 francs fine each and the other four to fines of 30,000 francs each. Another defendant, who did not appear, was sentenced by default to two years' imprisonment and 5,000 francs fine. The Mont de Pieté was awarded the franc damages which it claimed as civil parties to the case. The fines thus inflicted amount to about $30,000. It is understood that some of the defendants are Englishmen.
